FELL FROM BALCONY

Wounds Caused over Balcony which Suddenly Gave Way.

Mrs. Jonas Becker, of Porters, sustained a sprained neck and left foot in a fall at her home last Friday. She was leaning against a railing of a rear balcony porch, when it broke, precipitating her a distance of eight feet to the ground. Dr. L. H. Steer was attended her.

STORM VISITED JUST ONE FARM

But Wrought Havoc there, Blowing off Barn Door, Bending over Telephone Poles, Wrecking Fences and Doing Other Harm.

By a peculiar freak of nature the severe wind and rain storm which passed over Adams County about eight o'clock Wednesday centered for a fraction of a minute over the farm of Emanuel Shindledecker along the Chambersburg pike, two miles from Gettysburg, doing a large amount of damage and then passing on its way. In many sections of Gettysburg reported from any other section of the county, not in the form of a tornado. Stevens, 290 yards from the Shindledecker home, the influence of the storm was scarcely felt.

Six telephone poles along the road at Shindledecker's were bent down so low as to hinder traffic on the pike. A heavy wire fence was lifted from its banglings and carried across the pike where it was broken up so as to be beyond repair. Two fences were blown down and a portion of the roof of one of the outbuildings was ruthlessly swept away.

Mrs. Shindledecker had gone to the barn to close one of the doors when the wind struck it and it was caught by the newly escaped being killed. A swinging door missed her by a few inches and that was the closest call with accidents. Mrs. Shindledecker fainted as the storm passed on and the only other damage reported was from telephone and electric wires. Mr. Shindledecker's farm alone was the scene of any consequence. Mr. Shindledecker in discussing the occurrence, said,

"My very closest neighbors escaped without any loss at all and the storm just seemed to center over my building. Even the wind that blew here passed on, leaving damage that will cost me a good deal of money, and not on with very little warning and was gone almost before we knew what was happening."

SCORE DEAD IN WESTERN PENNA.

Flood Causes Property Loss of Fully $3,000,000.

MANY CITIES ARE INUNDATED

Industrial Plants Are Submerged and Over 5000 Persons Are Homeless—Pittsburgh Goes Over Its Banks.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 28.—At least a score of lives have been lost, and 5000 are rendered homeless by the flood waters in western and southern Pennsylvania and portions of West Virginia.

More than that number, it is feared, will be added to the compassionate list unfortunately handicapped and accurate information is not available.

The property loss, it is believed, will reach $3,000,000. Upwards of 2,000 workers are out of employment temporarily, through the flooding of hundreds of industrial plants.

The crest of the flood, five feet above that first predicted, was handled for Pittsburgh in a manner highly lauded by the weather bureau.

Wire communication between river points in West Virginia, south of Wheeling, was lost and this afternoon wet of Pittsburgh were all annulled. Nor is no telegraph or telephone communication north to Erie, and the wires to the city of Cleveland & Pittsburgh railroad severs connection with Cleveland and other points north.

Sharon and Newcastle, in Pennsylvania, and Wheeling, W. Va., face a grave flood situation. The Pennsylvania towns are completely under water, the latest reports showing the water 5 feet above the city streets. Wheeling practically is isolated, except for a few wires which have emerged above the water.

At Sharon ten persons are known to be dead. This number may grow larger as reports come in. The workers' homes are mostly frame, were crushed or drowned when their homes were undermined by the small streams surrounding Sharon the situation is regarded as serious.

Accurate conditions existing at Newcastle, Pa., are unknown. It is reported that the waters from the swollen Shenango river overlaid one of the many blast furnaces in that city, causing a terrific explosion. The same report intimated that other furnaces might be endangered in the same way. Serious loss of life from the explosion of the furnace is feared. Hundreds of the workmen previously had all been driven from their homes by the approaching water. A family of four perished in Newcastle, a small town in the canton when their home was swept away.

Wheeling, W. Va., is confronted with one of the worst flood situations in its history. With the Ohio river rising practically an inch a minute, and the city already under water, a stage of forty-eight feet was reached at last night by noon. Many hundreds of families are homeless and the property loss is large. Six fatalities occurred there.

WYOMING VALLEY FLOODED

Susquehanna River Overflows in Wilkes-Barre and Wilkesbarre.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., March 28. — The Susquehanna river reached a height of twenty-two feet at the government gaming station, which is the base taken by the Wyoming valley.

The stream near over its banks and submerged several of the smaller towns nearby. The water rose steadily until it had reached a height of twenty-six feet.

The water went over the lowlands on the west side and Wilkes-Barre was cut off from many of its suburban towns, all traffic being stopped.

The towns of Edwardsville, Kingston, Westmoor and West Nanticoke are nearly under water. Five hundred families have been driven from their homes and the property loss is enormous.

Reports from Nanticoke and Plymouth say that the situation is seriously handicapped and accurate information is not available.

TENER AP'EALS FOR AID

Calls on Pennsylvanians to Quickly Assist Flood Victims.

Harrisburg, Pa., March 28.—Governor Tener issued the following proclamation, appealing to Pennsylvania to assist the Ohio flood sufferers:

"The people of our sister state of Ohio have been overwhelmed by storms and floods of unprecedented magnitude, causing appalling loss of life and destruction of homes and property. The destitution and distress call for the prompt response which is characteristic of our people.

"Now, therefore, I, John K. Tener, governor of the commonwealth, do earnestly appeal to the citizens of Pennsylvania to extend to these sufferers our people generous contributions and assistance as the expression of the deep sympathy we feel."

This appeal was issued after Governor Tener had been served by Governor Cox, of Ohio, that owing to great loss of life, present disease and destruction in several sections of Ohio were not exaggerated.

Reading Visited by Cloudbursts.

Reading, Pa., March 28.—A severe rainstorm, accompanied by many cloudbursts, visited this section of the valley was followed by a two-foot rise in the Schuylkill river. The volume of water is reported coming down from above. The water is rising at the rate of a foot above low water mark. It is expected that it will go to ten feet. People living in the lowlands are much alarmed.

The Weather.

REFUSED TO LAUGH.

A Joke on Himself That Mark Twain Failed to Enjoy.

When Mark Twain was a resident of Hartford, Conn., he once called at the office of Dr. Swan, a local specialist of considerable repute, in connection with regarding a trivial ailment.

The physician was inclined to be rather arbitrary in his charges, was very loquacious and the time exceedingly to be consulted in regard to minor ailments. In this instance he caused a fee for his services that the enormously saluted Clemens thought excessive.

After a little comment Mr. Clemens declared that he would not pay any such price as the physician asked, and went to leave. Dr. Swan took a memo on Dr. Swan a voice said distinctly:

"Go along home, you old fool, you!"

Mr. Clemens, in a fury, looked around, angry through and through. "Where's that, sir?" he roared at the doctor. "Who's that you say?"

With a smile that was playing in its sweetness Dr. Swan pointed to a sage formation in test available. The eyes were swinging and chuckling with birdish glee, and explained:

"That is the gentleman who spoke to you, sir." Another explanation did not seem to reduce Mr. Clemens' mood very much, and he was heard by believed in Dr. Swan's innocence.—New York American.

The Worst Case.

"The worst case of confirmed outgoing honors," said a member of English at the University of Pennsylvania, "was the senior at Dr. Morris' school last year. Mr. Ellis cave wrote to the London Times:

"The current of the powers in Ohio is a mere whirlwind, spreading in a broad, very thrilling to the ignorant ear, ruinbeed to the eye, devastation of the groundlings, but which really does not go to the root of the matter as to cover for unidentical inaction, as a beautiful bird to tell our fears of ourselves, and as a lover whorwhich they are enabled to checkmate our policy.

"Insaiha," ended the instructor—"imagine a screen doing all that!"

California is hopeful that a combined Rugby football team from the United Isles of Oxford and Cambridge of England will play here on New Year's 1913. RUNAWAY TRAIN

Train Starts in Ilon Away Several Times, But Is Stopped.

It happened the other day: it happened in New Oxford; it happened on the W. M. R., and the train? Well, you don't know? It wasn't much, but still it was something to talk about and it might have been. All this is from the New Oxford Item, which continues:

The Ilon train which left here to the West was standing still—nearly all trains stand still on the W. M. The engineer had left his cabin, and so had the fireman for a short breathing of the bumps and rocking. Together they engaged in conversation. Notably the engine began to move, and when one gave it much attention; but there is danger there.

Slowly, and without warning, the engine's speed increased. Both men leaped for the cabin, and, fastest, the fireman, who shouted, children screamed, and women fainted. For directly in its path, near Gettysburg, the Evening Special was nearing down the track at a terrific speed, with its precious burdens. Nimble-witted Ilon ran back to grasp the situation, the engineer and fireman the departing engine. All eyes watched the race for safety. Ilon reached the engineer. Ah! he caught it, and soon the locomotive was under control. Destruction was skowered upon the hero of the hour, and he sat in the cabin, but the man accepted it modestly, as do all true heroes.

The engineer had hardly resumed his place in the conversation when the engine started off again on another more race, as thrilling as the first, but more successful. Ilon caught the engine and all was safe. And it was a happy pun once after that. Then, tiring of remaining at Gettysburg, the engineer grabbed several big stones and placed them around the wheels, and one and all felt much relieved. When the stones were gone, the stones were removed and the train then departed. Ilon got to the city on the W. M. What if—but!

FATAL RESULT OF OPERATION

Daniel Bair, of Near East Berlin, Injured in Explosion of Dynamite Dies from Blood Poisoning Following Operation.

Daniel Bair, the farmer of near East Berlin who was seriously injured by the premature explosion of dynamite on last Thanksgiving day, died Wednesday evening at 7:45 o'clock at the home of his son-in-law, L. Bair. Death was due to blood poisoning developing after an operation several weeks ago. The operation was performed at the York hospital.

He was sixty-seven years old and is survived by one sister, Mrs. Maria Harbold, Berlin, and seven children—Mrs. Jesse Smith, Lemoyne; I. B. Bair, Baker, Colo.; Dr. H. Reifsnyder, Philadelphia; Mrs. H. W. Brougher, Dover, Pa.; Mrs. Milton Bodley, of near East Berlin; Mrs. George Ziegler, of Lemoyne, and the son, Jacob L. Bair, with whom he lived.

The funeral will be held from the home Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. Further services and interment at the Valentine church. Rev. Henry Loose will officiate, assisted by Rev. Reuben Bair.

Mr. Bair had his face badly injured at the time of the explosion, but was not thought at that time that he would live. Many pieces of powder from the injuries and was taken to the York hospital where an operation performed on his lips, which were almost torn away by the explosion. He was in good health before going to the hospital, and it was thought that an operation would prevent the growth of flesh and skin on the lips. Blood poisoning followed the operation and Mr. Bair was taken home last week.

OLD LANDMARK IS TAKEN DOWN

Old Log Cabin on Steinwehr Avenue Found to be Unsafe and its Removal is Found Necessary. Had Interesting History.

One of Gettysburg's oldest landmarks fell to the ground Wednesday when the log cabin on Steinwehr avenue, just off of Baltimore street, was razed under the direction of its owner, Harry Lewis. The building was one of the most ancient in the town.

Mr. Lewis had hoped to save it from destruction until this summer's celebration occurred and he had received numerous requests to allow the building to stand until fall. Recently, however, it had given signs of falling apart and it was judged best for the sake of safety to raze it and the work was accordingly done.

Efforts to trace back the history of the home show that it was much over a century old. Some even claim it to be over two hundred. Since 1850 years and it certainly looked as though it might well walk to town. Mr. Lewis has owned it for some time and prior to his getting possession his mother owned the house, residing in it for over half a century. It is said that it was built by a man prior to her ownership. They also remember when it was used as a barn for sale and wide for their fine physique. It was a building of tall and finely proportioned men.

Numerous stories have been invented about the old house, but very few to which any credence is attached. One is that it was used by a man who said he had taken refuge in the house at the time of the battle and that he had saved his life. The veteran returned to Gettysburg and was known as a waiter at the old Battlefield Hotel. He was asked about the old log house during his stay here and told of having found such fine radishes and lettuce growing in the garden that he decided to save it.

Just before the battle opened Mr. Lewis's mother had died, leaving a large quantity of provisions in the house but the soldier either did not know of it or did not think to use them to allay his hunger.

The house was a typical log cabin of which there are now so few in existence in this section. It was always viewed with interest and curiosity by tourists and will be missed as a landmark.

Mr. Lewis may build another house on the lot in the near future, but for the present nothing will be done in that line.

AGED MAN LOST

On Way from New Oxford to Philadelphia Because Confused.

While on his way from New Oxford to Philadelphia, Jacob Hoffman, aged man becoming confused got off the train at Hanover Junction. April 3 found him wandering about the street, the police station in Hanover. He is now visiting his sister, Mrs. Samuel Wolford, of that place. He left New Oxford on Tuesday morning purchasing a ticket for Philadelphia. He was transferred to the N. C. R. at Hanover, and becoming confused forgot to change the ticket, and then told the conductor he was to go to Lancaster, paying his fare to the conductor. The baggageman saw him at Lancaster York, thinking he reached Philadelphia. A policeman saw him on Tuesday night and took the old man to the police station, where he told Sergeant Houck his name and that his sister is Hanover. The officer accordingly put him in a cell for the night. When he reached Hanover he was cared for by the police until after the hold vast. The question was referred to the poor directory committee.

William Henry Lewis, the borough clerk on the south side of Hanover street. He was away for a short time but had been authorized at a preceding meeting but no further action was taken.

An appropriation of $10 each was made to the police toward summer uniforms.

At a meeting to be held April 11th the appointment of the 12 night assistants now held by Mr. Frock will be made and approved of. Council adjourned to that date.

Miss Mary Smith has returned home after a visit of several days with friends in Hanover.

CATCHES SLOW PAYING HACKMEN

Council Passes Ordinance Over Burgess' Veto and Hackmen who Failed to Pay Last Year are Caught. Other Council Business

By the action taken at Tuesday evening's meeting of the town council those hackmen who failed to pay their license fee last year will be compelled to pay their fee under the new ordinance or else refrain from doing any hacking before June first. The ordinance would bar them from the public weeks of the Odd Fellows' celebration next week and be had received numerous requests to allow the building to stand until fall. ATTACKED GIRL ON TOWN STREET

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Hankey Attacked by Unknown Man but Made her Escape. No Clue to Assailant's Identity.

Marie Hankey, the sixteen year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Hankey, of Railroad street, was attacked by an unknown man over the Washington House livery stable Wednesday evening. She managed to free herself from his grasp and reached a place of safety at the home of Mrs. Stahle weeks of the Odd Fellows' celebration and Mayor Go As the new ordinance relies the fee for the re- pacity it would have been better for the girl to have gone home and told her story at once.

The possibility of soliciting for the past year is due to the fact that the year began on June 1st instead of January 1st.

Burgess Holtzworth vetoed the new ordinance with his veto on Tuesday evening saying that the ordinance is returned without my approval for reasons already filed, viz., the unjust- ifying capacity of a vehicle.The large number of hacks that are licensed for a year each so that some will not be used and pursued with a given purpose, which some has not been learned, but the alleys in that part of town are not lighted and are considered by various buildings and the chase was unsuccessful.

The girl told her parents, when she became somewhat composed, that she was walking in the alley when she was accosted by a man. About the time of the Bushey Run Baptist church, the Lisle street saw a white man come Thursday, evening, to the home of Holmes shoe store and Hop Lee's laundry and it is thought that, in her excitement, she ran through the alley, she may have made a mistake.

There is considerable talk over whatever to the fellow's identity.

FLITTING ACCIDENT

Covered Wagon in Flitting Upsets with Unpleasant Results.

Several persons were hurt in an accident which occurred on Race Hill on Tuesday afternoon. John Evans, of Hampden, was accompanying a flitting and had the following persons in his covered wagon: Ernest Geesey and children, of near Hampton, Mrs. William Green, near New Oxford, and Mrs. Ellen Bushey, of Hampden.

In going to the large tenons on the rear axle broke and the wagon was overturned, but fortunately the horse attached to the wagon was very quiet and it is perhaps, owing to this fact that the occupants of the wagon were not fatally injured, for when the accident occurred they were all thrown out. Mrs. Green was thrown with considerable force against a tree and received a severe cut on the head, which required several stitches to close. Mrs. Bushey received a bruised hip and Ernest Geesey received a bruised leg. The others escaped with their identity becoming known.

One is that it was used by a man who said he had taken refuge in the house at the time of the battle and that he had saved his life. The veteran returned to Gettysburg and was known as a waiter at the old Battlefield Hotel. He was asked about the old log house during his stay here and told of having found such fine radishes and lettuce growing in the garden that he decided to save it.

Just before the battle opened Mr. Lewis's mother had died, leaving a large quantity of provisions in the house but the soldier either did not know of it or did not think to use them to allay his hunger.

The house was a typical log cabin of which there are now so few in existence in this section. It was always viewed with interest and curiosity by tourists and will be missed as a landmark.

Mr. Lewis may build another house on the lot in the near future, but for the present nothing will be done in that line.

FIRST WORD FROM FLOOD DISTRICT

Mrs. Roy Deardorff Writes to Relatives at Cashtown of Experience during Disastrous Floods. Husband Missing Two Days.

To be separated from her husband for two and a half days, not knowing whether or not he had been drowned in the floods of last week, was the experience of Mrs. Roy Deardorff, of Hamilton, Ohio, who has written an interesting letter to her mother-in-law Mrs. Kate Deardorff, of Cashtown. The letter in the first received in this county from the flood district. Mr. Deardorff is employed as assistant cashier in a large lock factory at Hamilton, the factory being situated on the opposite side of the river from his home. The letter was written last Thursday evening March 27 two days after the flood had in part ex- followed Dear Mother and All—

We are saved. About five o'clock this morning we got word that we had to be moved at once. Just think, Mother, for we didn't know whether brother John and Roy were drowned or not, but both are safe and all right and, as far as I know, Roy will be able to come home shortly. They are getting out from Cincinnati and we are getting food from Oxford.

Four bridges went down. I saw the Main Street and Hamilton bridges go but the others went down at night. When the Main street bridge went down it carried the telephone, light, phone wires, gas and water pipes. I was on the bridge and pursued over it and pursued over it when it began to sway, but was not born to be drowned, but the alleys in that part of town are not lighted and are considered by various buildings and the chase was unsuccessful.

The girl told her parents, when she became somewhat composed, that she was walking in the alley when she was accosted by a man. About the time of the Bushey Run Baptist church, the Lisle street saw a white man come Thursday, evening, to the home of Holmes shoe store and Hop Lee's laundry and it is thought that, in her excitement, she ran through the alley, she may have made a mistake.

There is considerable talk over whatever to the fellow's identity.

FLITTING ACCIDENT

Covered Wagon in Flitting Upsets with Unpleasant Results.

Several persons were hurt in an accident which occurred on Race Hill on Tuesday afternoon. John Evans, of Hampden, was accompanying a flitting and had the following persons in his covered wagon: Ernest Geesey and children, of near Hampton, Mrs. William Green, near New Oxford, and Mrs. Ellen Bushey, of Hampden.

In going to the large tenons on the rear axle broke and the wagon was overturned, but fortunately the horse attached to the wagon was very quiet and it is perhaps, owing to this fact that the occupants of the wagon were not fatally injured, for when the accident occurred they were all thrown out. Mrs. Green was thrown with considerable force against a tree and received a severe cut on the head, which required several stitches to close. Mrs. Bushey received a bruised hip and Ernest Geesey received a bruised leg. The others escaped with their identity becoming known.

He was 68 years old and a veteran of the Civil War.

Mr. Bollinger was a farmer for twenty-four years. About five years ago he moved to Thurmont, where he was employed by a stock company. While he has been in declining health his condition was not thought serious. However, he had been advised not to work hard. Monday morning was one of the day. CALLS FOR HELP WERE IN VAIN

Emmitsburg Man Caught by High Waters Nine Miles from Calls for Help. Calls Heard but not Answered.

John Hoke, boss carpenter of Mt. St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, was drowned as a result of the high water, following Thursday's torrential rains. Mr. Hoke lives about 2 miles from Emmitsburg and to get to his home he had to cross Flat Run. It is at this point that while in Emmitsburg on Wednesday night he imbibed too freely and was taken from town by a friend, and when it was thought safe for him to proceed alone he started for his home but when returned to Emmitsburg. Thursday Hoke was missing all day and a search was made for him.

Not until late Thursday night was it learned that a small boy had seen Hoke along the creek in the morning endeavoring to get across and calling for help. The little fellow offered no help, as the high water was above his waist deep around the man. The boy did not report the matter until night.

The supposition is that after being left by his friend, Hoke slept along the creek bank, and in the early hours of the night the rain and the high water awakened him and he started to proceed ed by water and in a dazed condition, and was unable to save himself.

Search was made all night long under the landslides? are I found myself in the direction of the creek. Then I found myself in the direction of the creek. Then I found myself in the direction of the creek. Then Taneytown Record Says Young People Should Not Marry Too Early.

There is a well authenticated report that a hosiery manufacturer has Taneytown in view for his next location. It is quite probable that such a factory can get all the help here it needs, as there are lots of young folks who will not take places to do house work, who will work in factories—an opportunity for employment, in our opinion, and for a number of good reasons.—Carroll County Record.

MRS. PANKHURST GETS 3 YEARS

Convicted of Inciting Women to Bomb Outrage.

PLANS A HUNGER STRIKE

Followers Cried "Shame!" and Shouted Epithets at the Judge—Defied Police to Arrest Them.

London, April 4.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, president of the Women's Social and Political Union, and leader of the militant suffragettes, was found guilty of inciting other women to blow up the home of Chancellor David Lloyd-George with a bomb filled with bombs. She was sentenced to three years' penal servitude.

In passing sentence Justice Lush said: "Mrs. Pankhurst and the militant suffragettes in general for their violence, which, he said, showed only contempt for law and order.

As soon as the sentence was pronounced the women in the court room broke out in a chorus of "Shame!" and "Outrage!" With Mrs. Pankhurst's defiance in the dock, "I'll fight! fight! fight!" still ringing in their ears, the suffragettes were removed.

Standing on the seats they shrieked and shouted sentiments at the judge for three minutes they held full sway in the court, while the police were powerless. The judge's warning that he would commit the entire body of women to prison for contempt fell on deaf ears. The women mocked the judge and laughed at his threats, and they finally left the court room sing ing the suffragette "battle song" "Ask a woman's reason" composed by Mrs. Pankhurst.

Outside the court room the militant women defied the police. "Arrest us! Take us to jail! What do we care?" they shouted. The street crowd greeted the suffragettes with a tumultuous chorus of groans, hisses and hoots.

There is no possibility of Mrs. Pankhurst's release on bail pending the appeal. The suffragette leader will be confined in the same cell occupied by Mrs. Pankhurst when she was sentenced to three months' imprisonment for her militant activities.

Mrs. Pankhurst's closing address to the jury was: "Mr. Recorder, I have performed the court that she did not wish to call any evidence in her defense. She frequently wandered so far from the matter under trial that the judge ordered her to sit down.

Mrs Pankhurst denied any malicious incitement. "Neither I nor the other militant suffragettes are criminals or malicious," she said. "Women are not tried by their peers, and these trials are an example of what women are suffering in order to obtain their rights. Personally I have had to surrender a large part of my income in order to be free to participate in the suffrage movement.

Speaking with feeling, Mrs. Pankhurst declared she intended to break the laws and said that the divorce law alone was sufficient to justify her action by the women.

In conclusion Mrs. Pankhurst declared "Whatever may be my sentence I will not submit to it. I will not be a prisoner. I leave the court I will refuse to eat and you will see me no more, dead or alive at the earliest possible moment."

Justice Lush in summing up told the jury that Mrs. Pankhurst's speeches were an admission that she had incited to the perpetration of violent acts.

Mrs. Pankhurst's counsel broke down when her jury pronounced its verdict Leaning over the front of the dock he was overcome with emotion and it was impossible to hear a coherent word. He was to say to the jury that it by your duty as private citizens to find a verdict of guilty, but in this case it is a matter of affairs."

The verdict was received from Mrs Pankhurst with the most serene demeanor and she left the court room with the air of one who has triumphed.

CHEAP FIRE COMPANY

Shippensburg Fire Company cost only $20 Last Year.

"The Shippensburg fire department cost the borough council only $20 last year", says the Carlisle Sentinel. "If this is all it cost to maintain it, we suspect Shippensburg will discover some day that its fire equipment is sadly insufficient, although its companies are efficient. No doubt the companies themselves pay considerably for the upkeep of the department. Also fire service can be maintained for $20 a year; it requires hundreds or thousands of dollars, and if economically spent it is well spent".

FORETELLS END OF THE WORLD

Squire Hammers Sees in Recent Disasters Indications of the End of the World. Wickedness Everywhere, he Says.

Squire B. S. W. Hammers, of Highspire township, the self-styled "Pen Preacher" predicts that the end of the world is not far distant. He says:

"Looking at primitive predictions, we find that the world is to burn and cities and towns will be destroyed at one time by fire and sword, which is to come from the sky and as a result repeated earthquakes, then by great inundations of water and storms of which a large part of the United States have had the proof; then by pestilence and famine. Then the earth will scarcely produce her crops, owing to excessive heat or cold. Seasons will not preserve their regularity. Winter will lap over into spring. Wickedness will increase, all kinds of diseases and fresh and more frequent. Justice and truth will scarcely have an existence; the dignity of the government will not be preserved by military disciplines, but after the manner of ordinary police.

"The greatest sign the world has to display is the 'rolling away' in the second chapter of Second Thessalonians, in the third verse, we read 'For that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first'—a falling away from the faith and practice of the gospel. Nearly the whole New Testament is devoted to declared essential. One says there is no hell, another denies the raising of Lazarus, and the two eight quotes fifty such sayings from sermons sent us by preachers in the past week.

"Has the world ever witnessed a greater falling away from church attendance? There is a general complaint all over the land, churches are dropping organs, violins, pianos, dances and all worldly and popular displays to attract congregations, even to baseball games, preachers preaching to empty seats.

"No wonder the churches talk of bringing worldly amusements into the church. But all that will not help the case, the falling away from the faith and practice of the gospel, is the sign that the end is fast approaching.

When the students gathered in Brua Chapel at the usual hour Tuesday they found that some of their number had been busy the evening before and had rungleg a very effective "scene" on the platform. A calf's head had been removed from the Latin room and draped with a flag so as to look like an ocean from form. It was said where the audience could see it plainly and about the peninsula figure were numerous other "dignitaries". Henry, Simmons, and others, who were sitting about in an attitude of deep dejection. It develops now that the disappearance of the calf Monday morning was done by persons who thought they were working on the first of April.
